Key elements in organising & planning safe services

- Congregants are advised not to gather immediately outside the door before or after the service.
- All hard surfaces that are frequently touched, such as door handles, hand rails, seats, and taps should be cleaned regularly with a household detergent. Touching of surfaces should be minimised.
- It is recommended that congregants continue to wear cloth face coverings or masks during indoor services and ceremonies. A mask provides better protection than a visor, which should not be used unless there are specific problems with using the face mask. Please note the use of surgical masks rather than face cloth coverings is now recommended to be worn by people who are in high risk and very high risk cohorts when in confined community spaces.
- Singing in groups indoors should be limited in line with the capacity of the space, given appropriate social distancing requirements. Additional mitigation measures advised include checking for symptoms before starting, face coverings should be worn where this is practicable, smaller choirs, performing outside, shorter rehearsals.

- Members of the congregation should avoid singing, shouting, chanting and raising of voices, as this may increase the risk of airborne transmission of the virus.

How COVID-19 virus is spread

The virus is spread mainly through the air from the nose and mouth of a person with infection. For example, when the infected person coughs, sneezes, talks, sings, shouts or laughs. There is evidence that COVID-19 outbreaks are more commonly associated with crowded indoor spaces, and that poor ventilation may increase the risk of transmission in such settings by facilitating the spread of liquid respiratory particles over longer distances.

Surfaces and objects can be contaminated when liquid respiratory particles from an infected person fall onto them. You can therefore, also get infected if you touch - with your hands - a contaminated surface or object (for example a table top or a religious item) and then you touch your mouth, nose or eyes without having washed or sanitised your hands thoroughly.

The Health Information and Quality Authority (HIQA) has identified situations where COVID-19 is more likely to spread from one person to another. These include prolonged exposure indoors, having high numbers present or crowding, and poor ventilation [17]. Spread is also more likely if cloth face coverings or masks are not being used properly, and if those present are singing or shouting
